Noted Irish Tenor Becomes Citizen on His 35th Birthday.

JOHN M'CORMACK AMERICAN

New York, June 18 .- The night that he thrilled his first audience is incidental, and the moment that he realized that his fame was world-wide is of slight consequence, John McCormick the Irish tenor, declared yesterday mon becoming a citizen of the United States. The ceremony which made him an American_took place in the State Supreme Court. He was accompanied by several friends. It also happened to be his thirty-fifth birthday. When the Court congratulated him, the sad voice that made the "Long. Long Traff" a classic replied, "My heart quivers a bit," and when he took the oath of allegiance his answer was, Will I? Well, I should say so-so help me God."

McCormack's ambition to become a itizen last St. Patrick's Day suffered disappointment when he made application and learned three months more must elapse between declaration end intention, accompanied by presentation of first papers and actual admission to citizenship.
